NO "NATION THRIVES THAT PERSECUTES JEWS"

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

"No nation can have too many Jews. No nation thrives that persecutes Jews. Every nation has the sort of Jews that its treatment of them deserves . . . Fairly treated, they leaven the whole mentality of whatever land they enter. They are foremost in promoting not only its commerce and finance, but its expressionist arts. Strongly patriotic when they are allowed the chance of patriotism, they also have the international mind, great adaptability and the gift for reading the psychology of other peoples. The wise nation is the one that admits Jews most fully to its public, commercial and social life."

The above statements, culled from an editorial in Lord Beaverbrooks' Daily Express, which was considered anti-Jewish in its policy, are indeed most gratifying. No one familiar with the story of the Jew in the British Empire need wonder at this change in the policy of the Daily Express. It can only have come about by the piling up of evidence which proved overwhelmingly the error of its previous policy. In no country where there is an appreciable body of Jews, not even in the United States, have the Jews had as many opportunities, political, social and economic as in Great Britain. And Great Britain has "received the Jew it deserves," for in no country of the world, in proportion to their numbers, have the Jews achieved so much or rendered such effective service. The Marquis of Reading, Sir Herbert Samuel, Sir Alfred Mond, the Rothschilds, Claude Montefiore, Israel Zangwill, the Montagues and many others are names that will not only live in Jewish history, but will likewise ornament British history. Great Britain has keen kind to the Jew, and the Jew has paid back in kind. During the World War no group in England was more patriotic than the Anglo-Jewish group. Hosts of Jewish volunteers, officers and privates, paid with their lives for their love for England. The words of the Daily Express are not merely idle flattery. They are verified by the experience Great Britain has had with its Jews.

No wonder that the Daily Express takes Turkey to task for the recent expression of anti-Semitism. Turkey may well be warned, for no nation in history that has persecuted Jews has thriven. Spain was one of the great powers of the middle ages. The Jews shared her power and contributed to it. Spain expelled the Jews in 1492, and Spain fell from the seats of the mighty to be a second-rate power. When Spain issued the Expulsion Edict, some of the leading Jewish citizens settled in Holland, and the little Dutch state became the centre of the world's commerce. In modern times we have the example of the Russia of the Czars, persecuting, pogromming and hounding its Jews, a Russia so weak and ineffective that it had to yield to Japanese aggression. History certainly testifies that a Nemesis has overtaken those nations that have persecuted the Jews. By that we have in no way in mind the old belief that somehow God watches over Jews as He watches over no other nation. Such a belief is inconsistent with a modern man's conception of God. But we do have in mind that divine justice which does permeate history, and the fighting of all injustice whether against Jews or other weaker

THE COMMUNAL POT

Behold, the communal pot is on the fire again!

For a period of some four months it lay stowed away in the pantry among other utensils for which there is no use during the hot months. The cooks and other scullery attendants, who see to it that this weird vessel keep boiling incessantly, in the proper season, were away regenerating in the cool lake breezes, or the rarefied mountain atmosphere. The earth somewhow managed to stagger along on its axis, but who could fail to miss the delectable aromas that emanate from the Jewish communal pot when it does its seething?

There is already a hustling and a bustling in our communal kitchen. The different ingredients that go to make up the savory mess which will be cooked in the pot are being made ready. Chunks of Zionism, measures of charity, cupfuls of Hadassah, spoonfuls of Council of Jewish Women, pinches of Talmud Torah and portions of the various other communal ingredients are already on the table. Soon they will be dumped into the pot which is on the fire. And then the pot will boil and seethe and disseminate delicious aromas, and cook the decoctions which feed the stomach of our communal body.

And in good time there will come the bards who will sing the idyls of the communal kitchen.

THE RESIGNATION OF MR. WOOLF

In the resignation and departure of Joseph A. Woolf, former director of the Federation of Jewish Charities, the local community is losing an intelligent and capable public official.

As is well known, Jewish public life in America is in a chaotic state. The problems which confront our communities are numerous and complicated. And being young, our settlements have but little experience and very few resultant formulae to furnish direction and guidance in dealing with the problems.

In the spheres of religion and culture the lack of experiential wisdom is particularly noticeable. Our synagogues are groping in the dark, seeking to integrate themselves in our life. Our cultural leaders have been trying with but scant success to evolve feasible schemata for the needs of our cultural group being. It is only in the realm of philanthropy that a measure of scientific formulation of its problems and their solvents has been achieved.

If knowledge of social conditions and generalizations concerning their character can be called a science, then it may be said that here at least we have an approximation to a science. There are institutions where instruction in the various subject matters of social relief are given. There is a literature on these topics. There is a host of bright and capable men trained to deal with the problems of amelioration. In the one respect of our dealings with our needy neighbours we have attained a semblance of scientific orientation.

Mr. Woolf was a young man who belonged to the class of trained social workers. He had the requisite theoretical background for his work. And during his stay in this city he managed to impart to the activities of the Federation a broader perspective of social responsibility. Under his direction the Federation developed from a mere alms-dispensary to the level of a comprehensive communal institution.

A gathering of musicians, some of them new to Montreal, came together Sunday afternoon for a concert to celebrate the jubilee of the Jewish Daily Eagle. One of them, Dmitry Dobkin, sang here some years ago. He was formerly a member of the Petrograd Opera, and his numbers on the programme were chiefly operatic arias and Jewish songs. Miss Mary Craig, soprano, has not sung here before. In the concert was Mordecai Davan, a native of Palestine, first violin of the Metropolitan Opera. Miss Mildred Silverman played a series of accompaniments to these soloists. There were two other singers, cantors of Montreal synagogues, Rev. I.. Levinsky and Rev. D. Katzman. A short performance was given in the middle of the concert by the Marionette-Puppet Theatre of New York. The puppets are broad caricatures, getting a great deal of their effect with gestures of their large and expressive hands. The Jubilee, the twentieth anniversary of the Jewish Daily Eagle, was commemorated in addresses by Alderman J. Schubert and the Rabbi J. L. Zlotnik.

Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, who recently celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday, is the outstanding figure in the American Jewish community because of his great benefactions among Jews, Christians and particularly Negroes. All sorts of philanthropic, social and educational undertakings are indebted to him for his interest and millions of dollars. The whole world is further indebted to him now for his explanation, made on his birthday, as to how he came to be a rich man. For, as the richest man in Chicago and one of the twenty or thirty richest men in the world, Rosenwald smudged all copy book and bunk formulae for success when he said: "I was lucky, not a genius. With rare exception, the man who accumulates wealth displays no more genius than the prize-winner in a lottery. It is by luck that a man gets hold of a good thing at the right time and more by luck he holds on to it."

Mr. Rosenwald has spent more than three millions of dollars in projects to better the relations with Negroes in this country; he has given the same amount to the new Rosenwald Industrial Museum in Chicago; with Mrs. Rosenwald he has given nearly two millions of dollars for new buildings for the University of Chicago; his large gifts to war relief were made in Eastern Europe without discrimination as to race and in 1918 alone he gave one million dollars to this cause; in 1925 he promised to contribute one million dollars toward the first nine millions of the United Jewish Campaign; in 1921 he offered his private fortune of twenty-one millions of dollars to safeguard the interests of Sears, Roebuck and Company during a period of readjustment; the amount of money he commands is at least fifty millions. So when Rosenwald opposed his weighty opinion as to how men become wealthy against the popular American success credo of hard work and thrifty habits, the editorial champions of that doctrine rushed to "explain" what this authority on wealth really meant.

They wrote long and hard to show that "luck" is the ability to see opportunity and to take advantage of it and to stick with it until it produces fortune. But they couldn't explain away the fact that there are millions of men who have that ability who have never even been near opportunity and millions who have missed opportunity by something as unprepossessing as, say, a headache which kept them from being pleasant at the right moment. There are many wealthy mediocrities whose money piled up overnight through circumstances outside the control of the owners and these men often stand in bewilderment at the real ability of others who can't spare a week from the battle for rent and food. Hundreds of thousands of men in this country must use more brains more cleverly more often than most of the rich just to get enough together to insure an independent old age. All of these people must have been refreshed to hear it proclaimed at last that it takes more luck than brains or grubbing or scrimping to make a pile of money.

Perhaps because Rosenwald is so sure of this and because he feels that he is the lucky custodian of millions with which to do good for other human beings, he is modest and unassuming, with no delusions of grandeur. A writer in the Wisconsin Jewish Chronicle tells of having travelled with Rosenwald in a party to attend the first meeting of the Jewish Distribution Committee which launched the fifteen-million-dollar relief drive. He says: "He travelled as one of the boys, asking no special favours and refusing any special consideration. When the party met in the dining car after dinner to discuss the matter of the J. D. C. meeting, Mr. Rosenwald did not monopolize the floor despite the fact that he had at the time made up his mind to give another $1,000,000, which fact we strongly suspected. He was just as good a listener as he was a talker. He was just as considerate to the negro porter who arranged the chairs as he was to the next richest man in the group. He put on no airs. Big men that are big don't go out of their way to make smaller men feel smaller. His modesty and wholesome democracy made every little man feel big. We respected him more for being plainly human than for being unspeakably rich. The biggest thrill he got on the trip was when he opened a package given him by his grandchildren which contained a small clock in a leather case. He displayed it around to the others with more pleasure than we imagine he gets when Sears Roebuck stock goes up another few points, making him richer by millions."

Rosenwald's philosophy includes a maxim of Robert Ingersoll: "I would rather be a beggar, spending my money like a king, than a king hoarding my money like a beggar." Rosenwald's royal spending makes him the volunteer representative of one persecuted people uplifting and extending a hand to another people much more persecuted in this country. A Jew, he is the great white brother of the Negro race, the poorest, the lowliest, the most downtrodden, the most abused people in America. Born in the north, Springfield, Ill., Rosenwald has established schools and colleges for Negroes in fourteen Southern states. He gave nearly one-half million dollars and stimulated campaigns which resulted in providing eighteen Negro Y.M.C.A. buildings in sixteen cities and has pushed campaigns which resulted in 3,433 completed rural school buildings for Negroes in the South, himself contributing nearly three millions of dollars to this cause. That the Negroes should have all this and more as a matter of social policy and right is beside the point. That they have received what they have received through the magnanimity of a sympathetic Jew, Julius Rosenwald

"Don't be a bit timid"

A trip through this new laundry will convince anyone, beyond doubt, that even the most delicate of fabrics is washed without wear and tear. Buttons cannot break and at no point is there any actual rubbing. Your wash is placed in a cotton mesh bag, which takes the brunt of the tumbling about in the hot suds of the washers, so that there is no actual contact between the wash and the tumbler. Soft water and pure soap with many rinsings is further assurance. Phone for particulars of our five different family wash services.

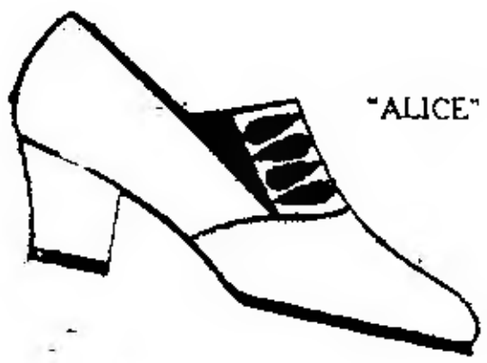
The Story of the Fall Shoes
by G. E. Chambers
DESIGNER OF THE KNOX PACEMAKER and REST-O-PEDIC SHOES

Chapter I—THE SLIPPER IDEA

One of the newest Fall shoes borrows an idea or two from the old-time slipper, renowned for its comfort. It has a well-shaped instep and enlists the aid of an elastic insert to secure a fit that is at once tight and comfortable.

The instep, however, is more than a comfort feature. It gives the shoe a very distinctive style touch, having fancy cut-outs from which the colored hose that fashion decrees can peek through in effective contrast.

It is offered in Black Kid, Patent Leather and Black Satin at $10, or Brown Kid at $12, all with medium low heel that makes walking comfortable.



"ALICE"

Those who have seen this new shoe—who have tried it on—have said such nice things about "Alice" that we look upon it already as an Autumn favorite.

OCTOGENARIAN DIES

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

An octogenarian—almost on the verge of being an nonogenarian—Miss Amalia Marks passed quietly away a few days ago. One of those self-effacing creatures—her life had been one of continuous sacrifice for those about her. I first met her when she was well along in the fifties. Even then she had done more than her share. Rumour had it that in her early youth she had met with a great disappointment. In order to find forgetfulness, she came over to America to join her relatives. When misfortune overtook her dear ones and they lost most of their worldly possessions, she did not desert them, but came along with them to Toronto, there to help them rebuild their fortunes. There was a growing family whom she helped to raise—never a murmur, never a complaint passed her lips. And when sickness laid the master of the household low on his bed for ten long years, she too shared the nursing with the others; always willing, always doing for others, day and night, unceasingly. It was sad to see them, one after the other, passing away, until she was alone in her old age. At the very time when comfort and peace should have been hers as a reward for the great sacrifice she had made, she was alone. But staunch friends, of whom she had plenty, tried to ease her last years. One longed to picture her during these latter years seated in an arm chair, a cushion at her back, some fine old lace at her throat, a bit of it on her beautiful white hair—her hands at last folded in her lap. But, alas, such a beautiful ending was not for her.

ROBERT SIMPSON CO. FASHION SHOW

When the Marmein Sisters came to the city last season with the Robert Simpson's Fashion Show, a great many persons seemed to overlook the fact that they were rather above the average of dancers, even in a community where dancing, amateur and professional, is so constantly in evidence in entertainments. The Marmein Sisters came back again on Saturday as one of the features of the Fall Fashion Display at the Victoria Theatre. They are three graceful girls, and they have a gift for pantomime that enables them to specialize in dances that tell a story. Their first group opens with the dance of the Rhine Maidens, from Wagner's "Rheingold." The second group opens with an amusing Pierrot number, entitled "The Eternal Triangle" with its rater conventional humours. It is followed by a clever solo dance entitled "His Maiden Voyage," danced to some ultra-modern music by Holst. The Hindu Dance of Destruction brings their performance to a close. Their accompaniments are furnished by a quartette consisting of a pianist, a violinist, a 'cellist and a flautist.

Of course the purpose of a fashion show is fashions, and the Marmein Sisters only come in as divertissements. The performance opens with moving pictures and the captions give some information regarding the trend of colours and other developments in ladies' clothes for the coming winter. Then, following the dancers, the models commence to appear and it requires well on to two hours to display the vast collection of smart frocks and coats that will grace the Canadian girl during the coming autumn and winter. First, the early street gowns and wraps are displayed with a great array of sports clothes both for hot and cold weather. Next made a bigger hit in the show with the colourful and bizarre costumes worn for the winter girls. They are shown skating and tobogganing, and the introduction of breeches is an innovation that will be noted. The showing of our schemes are what make the particularly attractive, and the Canadian scene is going to be the most effective next winter, with these costumes against a background of white. The young woman does a number by herself when she displays a collection of heavy coats, and fur coats that speak volumes of money and luxury bring the first half of the revue to a close. After the intermission the children's clothes are exhibited. Among the popular hits of the show are two small boys, quaint and very solemn, who walk sedately across the stage in clothes suitable for youthful males. They are good-looking little fellows, and becomingly shy, so that they won the approval of the audience at once. But there were no signs of shyness about the precocious little girl models. They prinked and strutted and postured across the stage, as though all their ancestors since Eve tried on the first fig leaf had been mannequins, and their self-satisfied airs and graces amused the audience too. They were like tiny embodiments of the spirit of Theodosia Garrison's verses, "Thank God for Clothes." Following the children came designs suitable for drawing-room and theatre frocks, smart gowns, drapes and shawls, and bridal garments were the climax of the revue.

NO NATION THRIVES THAT PERSECUTES JEWS, SAYS BEAVERBROOK

Lord Beaverbrook's "Daily Express," often accused of being anti-Jewish, and frankly anti-Zionist, Saturday morning contained a most striking pro-Jewish editorial. After condemning Turkey for recent signs of anti-Semitism, the paper said:

"No nation can have too many Jews. No nation thrives that persecutes Jews. Every nation has the sort of Jews that its treatment of them deserves. The number of Jews in any given land and the position they occupy in it are pretty good measure of its prosperity.

"Conversely, it is never a sign of commercial health when the Jews show a tendency to desert a city or a country, and no longer think its prizes worth the struggle. Fairly treated, they leaven the whole mentality of whatever land they enter. They are foremost in promoting not only its commerce and finance, but its expressionist arts.

"Strongly patriotic when they are allowed the chance of patriotism, they also have the international mind, great adaptability and the gift for reading the psychology of other peoples. The wise nation is the one that admits Jews most fully to its public, commercial and social life."

ACTRESS, GRANDMOTHER OF NINE, TO STAR IN NEW PLAY AT SIXTY-TWO

A slender girl of fifteen made her debut forty-seven years ago in a now forgotten theatre of Russia, to be hailed by her countrymen as "the future greatest actress in the world."

Now, at sixty two, she has signed a new contract with Maurice Schwartz, director of the Yiddish Art Theatre, 12th Street and Second Avenue, New York. "The grandmother of the Jewish stage" is Bina Abramowitz. In private life she is the wife of Kalman Yuvilier, Jewish actor the mother of six and nine times a grandmother.

In the company with which she came to America forty-one years ago were such stars of the Jewish stage as Jacob Adler, David Kessler, Sigmund Mogulesco and Mme. Lipzin. These are all dead, but Bina Abramowitz survives, looking nowhere near her sixty two years. Her art, she says, has kept her young.

Thousands of Jews have laughed and cried with her in the years that she has been playing on the east side for Bina Abramowitz can take any sort of part.

When asked whether she thought of retiring, she smiled and said: "The stage is my life. I'll let the public be the judge of when I am to leave—my dear public."

peoples which the experience of the race verifies.

We do not believe that Spain fell merely because she persecuted Jews, or that Russia stagnated because of her anti-Semitic policy. The reactionary forces which caused Spain to exile her Jews, and the tendencies which led to Russia's anti-Semitism, are the forces and tendencies which spelled disintegration for a nation. Bigotry and prejudice are the handmaidens of ignorance and malevolence. No nation can attain to world stature when ignorance and malevolence hold sway. Spain and Russia, falling into the hands of stupid and malevolent leaders, were doomed and anti-Semitism was one of the precursors of their doom. Where there is enlightenment, goodwill, truth, there can be no anti-Semitism. Where there is darkness and prejudice and impending failure anti-Semitism will rise. A healthy, thriving vigorous nation will not cultivate the anti-Semitic bacilli.

Not only is anti-Semitism a sign of a nation's degeneration, but a free and emancipated Jewry is a decided asset. The Jew is vigorous, imaginative. He has generally not succumbed to smugness and complacency. He plans, builds and develops. In the United States the cities are being transformed by the creative and artistic genius of the Jew. Wherever the Jew is, he is a generous patron of the arts. Among artists he is well represented. The great orchestras leaders of the world have their share of Jewish names. The great orchestras of our continent have their share of Jewish musicians. In the plastic arts the Jew is well represented, and among the world's great virtuosi Jews are found. In the literary field, in the academic pursuits, the Jew is distinguishing himself in all countries of the world. Surely the Jew is an asset to any country and can contribute to its spiritual as well as to its material development.

We wish to call this news item to the attention of our Department of Immigration with the hope that it would have some effect on its attitude towards Jewish immigrants. Canada needs people. If Lord Beaverbrook's paper is right, the Department would be rendering a great service to Canada if it would encourage Jewish immigration.

If because of lack of resources it did not manage to function to the fullest extent of its possibilities, it nevertheless had at least a proper conception of what its duties and responsibilities were. Our Federation may have been weak, but it had a clear understanding of what Federation with adequate means should do. Knowledge and clear-thinking in one sphere of communal life are valuable assets in themselves, even if they are not put to use.

Mr. Woolf has the good wishes of the community on his departure to other fields.

THREE BIG LITTLE WORDS

Happy New Year

AT the advent once more of the High Holidays comes the beautiful Jewish custom of sending New Year's Greetings to one's relatives and friends. This custom, originated by the Jewish people, is thousands of years old. In ancient Judaea the town crier would carry the message to the dwellers in the villages and the cities, to the country-folk gathered in the towns to celebrate Rosh Hashonah in the traditional manner.

With the flight of time the honourable profession of town crier disappeared. But the deeply rooted custom among the Jewish people of sending "L'Shono Tovu" greetings remained. And there gradually grew up a custom of sending personal greeting cards through the mails. Many of these cards were works of art, and are treasured as heirlooms to this day.

When cities and towns were small, and one knew one's friends intimately, this system worked perfectly. But as cities grew, and one's circle of friends extended, it was inevitable that in the hurly-burly of sending hundreds of cards, some cherished friends were overlooked. The endless explanations and heart-burnings caused the development of a new and better system.
